☐ I do not want to charge my purchase with currency conversion.

If you use a credit card, charge card or debit card to pay for charges that are denominated in the currency of one country and the card was issued in a country that uses a different currency, then, if it is permitted to do so by applicable law, the Hotel may (but will not be required to) convert the charges into the currency of the country in which the card was issued and process the charges in the converted currency. If the Hotel elects to convert such charges, then such charges will be converted into the currency of the country in which the card was issued on the date the Hotel or its agents forward the charges to Hotel's card processor at a rate set by Hotel or an entity designated by Hotel based on an interbank, tourist or (where required by law) official rate, increased in each instance by a currency conversion charge of up to 3.40%. This rate may differ from the rate in effect on the date the charges were incurred and may also differ from the rate you would pay if the Hotel were to forward the charges to the card's issuer in the currency in which the charges were originally .
